As an extension of this exchange, an agreement will then be signed between FIFA and the French Development Agency (AFD), which want to join forces to multiply the impact of their respective development actions through sport in Africa.

Sport is at the heart of the vision of the President of the Republic for the development of the African continent. He had asked AFD to make sport an axis of cooperation between France and Africa to achieve several Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), especially in terms of education and equality between women and men.

Later, in February 2018, during his meeting with the President of the Republic of Liberia, Mr. George WEAH, the President of the Republic concretely structured his ambition around the construction of a platform for transformation through sport in Africa. , with an initial budget of 15 million euros and supported by AFD. Since then, AFD has worked to support several projects while seeking to increase international funding for development through sport in Africa. On July 4, 2018, in Lagos, Nigeria, a first major partnership with an international sports structure, the NBA was sealed. This new signature, with FIFA, on June 4, 2019, symbolizes the first meeting between the world of football and the one of development. The projects supported through this agreement will focus on the themes of gender equality and access to education, in line with the priorities of the commitment of the President of the Republic.
